Voices of Literature. This course is centered around the notions of identity and belonging, with an emphasis on how issues of race, gender, and class in the United States affect how we decide who we are, and where we fit in. Throughout the year, we will develop a common vocabulary for discussing literature, and learn the skills necessary to become careful, analytical readers. Through our study of grammar and root-word vocabulary, we will work on composing thoughtful analytical essays, and reflective personal narratives
