World Literature II

World Literature II considers fiction, poetry, and drama from around the world that addresses the forces which have shaped modern human existence. The last 120 years have empowered authors to tell stories relating to the perseverance of regular people, highlighting their daily struggles with finding meaning and purpose in the context of a world that has seen drastic political and social change. The democratization of literature has proven to be dynamic; a modern reader has the opportunity to explore written works as a way to glimpse the existence of people outside of their own cultural milieu. World Literature II addresses themes related to social justice, identity, isolation, relativity of the truth, and human endurance. Each work we will read will represent a different part of the world and a different perspective.
